

Like Savages, Wessex Mill is a family business, based in Wantage, Oxfordshire, where the Munsey family has been milling for four generations, from William Henry Munsey in 1895, through to Bill (WH's grandson) and Paul (WH's great grandson) who run the mill today.

Whilst probably being the smallest flour mill left commercially roller milling wheat, the award-winning flour at Wessex Mill has been milled using wheat grown locally, to produce top quality bread with flour that is consistent.
